St. Alban's Whist Drive Successful

The move to the Elks hall, with its comfortable surroundings, appears to be the right move for this evening of fun and entertainment.

We are sure that those who did not turn out at the whist drive, missed a very excellent evening, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. After the evening of cards, lunch was served by the ladies of the Women's Auxiliary ably assisted by the Vestrymen.

Here again your money's worth was received with plenty of good food and coffee.

The happy winners were as follows:

Coleman Teachers Attend Institute at Pincher Creek

On January 17th the teachers of the Pincher Creek Inspectorate met in the Matthew Hulton high school in Pincher Creek to attend a one-day in-service training program.

One hundred and twenty-two teachers from schools located between the Macleod School Division and the British Columbia border were in attendance.

The program was arranged to provide for two sections. In the Elementary School Section, where science in the elementary school was the theme, guest speakers and consultants were Mr. N. M. Purvis, superintendent of schools at Taber, and Mr. M. O. Edwards, assistant director of curriculum, Department of Education, Edmonton.

Chairman of the elementary section was Mr. M. D. McEachern, superintendent (cross-country) of School District. The recorders for this section were Mrs. A. Bowen of the Pincher Creek Primary school staff and Mr. C. Jacob, principal of the Pincher Creek Elementary School.

The program for the Elementary Section opened with an hour long demonstration showing the integration of science education and social activities through the use of the Enterprise Method.

This demonstration was conducted by Mrs. H. Ankil, vice-principal in charge of the Pincher Creek primary school, and her class of 26 pupils. The project demonstrated was "The Fireman - A Community Helper". Mr. Albert Ames, the Pincher Creek fire chief, also participated. This demonstration of good classroom procedure in culminating a series of lessons was highly commended by the visiting speakers and by the teachers attending this session.

In the Junior and Senior High School section the guest speakers and consultants were Mr. S. Norris, Faculty of Education University of Alberta at Calgary; Mr. C. B. Johnson, high school inspector for Southern Alberta; Mr. T. V. Hammond, reeve of the Municipality of Pincher Creek; Mr. M. Chabrier of the Pincher Creek high school staff, and Mr. C. Richards, principal of the Matthew Hulton high school.

During the day this section dealt with three topics. The first of these was "The Laxgard Student" for which Mr. H. Allen, principal of the Coleman school, was chairman and Mrs. E. Bundy, of the Pincher Creek junior high school staff, was recorder. The second topic was

Pass Legion To Sponsor Dist. 6 Dart Tournament

The Pass Legion branches have undertaken the task of sponsoring the annual district dart tournament for District 6 of the Canadian Legion held each year.

This decision was taken at a zone meeting held under the chairmanship of Bert Moorhouse, zone commander, of Blairmore, with Provincial President W. Williams in attendance.

Teams are expected to enter from Legions as far east as Medicine Hat, and plans are being prepared by a special committee comprised of the three Pass branches to hold this tournament on March 22nd.

A further meeting will be held this Saturday to draw up the rules and procedure. It is hoped to draw at least 36 teams from the six zones in the district.

"Home-work" for this topic Mr. C. Richards was general chairman and Mr. J. S. Ondrus of the Coleman high school staff was recorder. The third topic was "When Is Good Teaching Taking Place?" Mr. Wm. Marcolin was chairman for this topic and Mrs. C. Borden of the Pincher Creek high school staff served as recorder.

In his opening remarks Dr. K. H. Thomson, Department of Education representative for the inspectorate, expressed the hope that the day would prove stimulating and profitable. Although the teachers in the junior and senior high school section found the day too short to deal with their program as fully as they would have wished, the comments of those present indicated that the hope was realized.

Coleman High's Choice For Queen Contest

YVONNE GRUBISICH

The Coleman high school's choice for Queen candidate to run in this year's Crowns Nest Pass Winter Carnival is Miss Yvonne Grubisich. She is the attractive 17-year-old daughter of John Grubisich of Summit Lake Works.

Yvonne, a scholastic student, was born and raised in the Crowns Nest Pass. At present she is completing her senior year in high school. Yvonne is very sports minded—among her favorites and those in which she participates are bowling, skating, swimming and skiing. She is also an ardent hockey and baseball fan.

Besides this our candidate has an extremely pleasing personality, and is an excellent dancer. She is secretary of the High School Students' Union, a member of the Coleman Dramatic Club and also a senior first aid student in St. John Ambulance Association.

Yvonne has one brother, Andy, who is 15 years old.

Lots Acquired For New Post Office For Coleman

(Courtesy Lethbridge Herald)

T. J. Costigan, solicitor for the town of Coleman and agent for the minister of Justice of Canada, informed The Herald today that title to lots eight, nine and ten in Block six, Plan Coleman 3201, have been issued in the name of Her Majesty the Queen in Right of Canada and that it is expected that a federal public building for a post office will be erected on this site in the very near future.

The lots acquired are immediately east of the Coleman theatre building on Main Street. Lot eight was purchased from the town of Coleman while lots nine and ten were purchased from the Miners' Union. The sum of $1,000 per lot was paid, totalling $3,000 for the three lots.

Recent reports on the post office building for Coleman had indicated that some $50,000 would be spent on the new building but this figure has not been confirmed.

Former Coleman Residents Retire In East

A news clipping from the Ford Rouge News gives the news that former Coleman residents have retired from the Ford plant at Belleville, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Bowman resided here during the First World War. The news clipping gives us to understand that Martin Bowman has worked in the glass division for 27 years before retiring. It also states that they are really enjoying their retirement with many hobbies and they attend many organizations to which they belong.

Continuing the name of Bowman on Ford's payroll are two sons, Tom, a 25-year-old employee in the tool and die plant, and Martin, a designer at the Belleville plant.

Through meagre information we understand that Mr. Bowman lost his leg while working on a lorry car at the coke ovens while employed here many years ago.

It would be appreciated by The Journal if anyone here could give us further information regarding the Bowman residence here as we sincerely like to print good news of our old-timers.

Certificate of ownership of a piece of property—a land title—is a document Albertans treat with high regard. Charged with keeping an official record of such titles are two provincial government Land Titles offices at Edmonton and Calgary. Since 1906 an estimated two million titles have been issued and each year some 30,000 changes are recorded.

A "land title" is a document defining the owner and location of a piece of property. It lists any encumbrances against the land. These may include mortgage, tax caveats, liens or other instrument judgments. Also listed are details of mineral rights. All titles issued by the offices are guaranteed by the government to be correct in every detail. In the event that an error is made, the Province then is liable for any losses that a party may have suffered. Such claims are payable out of "Assurance Fund" to which each person securing a new title pays a nominal amount, based on the value of the property registered.

System of guaranteed title or the "Torrens system" is practised in Canada by two provinces, Alberta and Saskatchewan. Other provinces are in the process of converting. Under the Torrens method each owner of property is given a duplicate certificate of title, and original is filed with the Land Titles office. Endorsements of various types are listed on both. Under the system employed by other provinces each encumbrance is recorded on the same document, but no guarantee is given that all transactions have been recorded.

Any person is entitled to a "search for title" upon payment of a nominal 50 cent fee.

Title transfers are the most common of duties performed by staff.

Duplicate title is accompanied by the transfer application. Title is checked for correct description of property, name of last registered owner, caveats, and information on any judgments held against the property. Accuracy is assured by additional checking by an assistant registrar. The old title is cancelled and a new one issued to the new owner.

Staff at the two offices number 150 including a registrar, in each office deputy registrars, and assistant deputy registrars.

Two Print Shops

In an effort to get a print job done during the busy holiday season, I visited two print shops and I was greatly struck by the difference between them.

The machines were much the same; but the tempo of activity was strikingly different. The first shop was a leisurely, slow-paced, snap-happy operation. At the counter, the man said, "Nooo... don't think we could handle that in w. You should of come earlier... holidays and all..." The second shop looked, sounded, and was a going concern, with machines clicking at full speed, operators chipper and active. At the counter the man said—with a wide grin—"If you'll leave it with us, we'll do our darndest. Hey, Charlie!"

Charlie came over and the man said, "Think we could get this out for the man? He's in a bit of a spot."

Charlie asked me a few quick questions about type face, headline, color, and willingness to pay a bit of overtime if need be. Then he said, "We'll do our best—I think we can handle it by the deadline. I'll guarantee it for the 28th, though."

They did the job, sent a car for me to come and read proof right in the shop, and there was no overtime required. I started to thank the boss profusely. He said, "You really ought to thank Charlie—but the best way to thank us is with your next print job." He said it with a grin, of course, but he meant it and he'll get my next print job and I'll have it at his shop at the earliest possible moment.

One other thing about those two shops has stuck in my mind ever since.

That was the expression on the faces of the boys and girls at work in the leisurely shop, they looked gloomy, tired, unhappy. In the fast-moving set-up, they looked alert, happy, enterprising.

I'm convinced that in an organization where everyone is going full tilt against deadlines, there is more genuine goodwill and fine spirit than you find in situations where workers may even be lying their best. When everyone is on his toes, snapping into the job, there's an inescapable spirit of zest and pep.

I may be wrong but I'd be willing to make a bet that the men in shop one feel more tired at the end of the day than the chaps in shop two!

DO IT NOW

In the "old days," people accepted the annual winter slump in the same spirit that they accepted the first snowfall or death and taxes. The cold weather's here and there is nothing that we can do about it" was their attitude towards the great robber named winter unemployment.

Across the country today, however, streamers and posters and highly organized employment campaigns tell an entirely different story. There is no time for sitting around complaining about our winter climate, for this is "Do It Now" time. "Why wait for spring?" is a popular campaign query, and people who are firm in the knowledge that men and materials on hand right now will be scarce by spring, are not waiting for the return of the song-birds.

William Duncan, prairie regional director of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, and its National Employment Service, says that the "Do It Now" drive, bolstered by even greater organization and support than a year ago, bids fair to outstrip the results of former years. The U.I.C. director notes that emphasis on the "three R's" has returned with a new twist: "Repair, Remodel, Renovate." He finds that householders are becoming more and more conscious of the advantages of having this type of work done now: contractors and skilled tradesmen are not so rushed in the winter, and with materials readily at hand they can take on your job right away and complete it without interruption.

A former president of the Canadian Construction Association, W. C. Malcolm of Winnipeg, says that "Canada now leads the world in winter construction, and the Prairie Provinces lead Canada."

A busy construction executive, and head of Winnipeg's winter employment committee, he catches the true spirit of seasonal unemployment when he labels it a "hang-over" from the days of early settlement. Intelligent planning and modern methods are being stressed today; the days of hibernation, when communities were isolated by limited transportation and communications, are a thing of the past. In recent years there has been a trend towards more outside winter construction as well as towards inside building work in winter. Projects including factory extensions, commercial buildings and government projects varying from one floor to many stories closed-in and busily under way are to be seen from the Rockies to the Lakehead—to take only the Prairie region as an example of building activity. A lack of interruption and earlier occupancy are important considerations involved in such winter projects.

Success of the winter employment campaigns will be greater than ever judging by the growing awareness that unemployment means a loss of buying power, a loss of trade to business and industry, and a loss of manpower that can never be recovered. Old ideas and customs die hard, however, and some of the winter employment committees are still fighting out-moded opinions about winter work.

Campaign leaders are stressing that unemployment is not only the problem of the jobless man but of the employed man as well; that it is everybody's worry. The economists tell us that the effects of unemployment act like the chain reaction which results when a stone is thrown into a pond causing the ripples to spread out until they reach the shore. Likewise, of course, the effects of creating employment spread their benefits through the whole community. Every job that can be provided—no matter how small—is a benefit to you, to your neighbor and finally to everyone else in the community.

The employment committees and the winter employment committees are doing a wonderful job in this region, along with the forces of business, industry, labor and government. But final success of the campaigns depends on Mr. John Citizen; his effort to find someone a job or to direct him to one, is what will help to reverse the winter slow-down by giving new life to the economy—and new hope and confidence to those less fortunate than ourselves.

"When everybody works, everybody benefits."

Bows and arrows hunting weapons in Alberta area

EDMONTON, Alta. (cp)—George Fraser of Edmonton was the first to bag a bull elk with a bow and arrow in Alberta this season.

Mr. Fraser, a veteran woodsman, returned to Edmonton with a three-year old 450 pound elk after five days of hunting in the Bow River Corridor.

The Corridor, which stretches from Banff Gate to the Kananaskis Crown Reserve, has been set aside under provincial legislation as an exclusive bowman's paradise, permitting only archers to hunt in the area. The hunting season in the area coincides with the regular hunting season.

Mr. Fraser, one of 100 members of the Edmonton Bowhunters' Association, was the third person to bag an elk. The other two animals shot, however, were females.

The former Prince George guide ended five days of searching by coaling across a herd of 20 animals. He was within 60 yards when the herd bolted.

From that distance he successfully hit the elk in the abdominal area slowing the bull down. Another shot found its mark.

Mr. Fraser's weapon was a fibre glass bow with a 48 pound pull, comparatively light for hunting big game. His regular size arrows were equipped with broadheads—consisting of six blades.

An archer for less than four years, Mr. Fraser says hunting conditions were far from ideal this year. Early winter snow had disappeared during a mild spell, making stalking and tracks difficult. He suggested that since the area is restricted to archers, red clothing could be dispensed with, enabling the hunter to take full advantage of camouflage while stalking game.

"An archer must be within 70 yards of his target to be effective," he said. "So there is little danger that a human being could be mistaken for an animal at that distance."

N. S. fisherman lives on vessel all year round

LIVERPOOL, N.S. (cp)—Edward Himmelman, fishing out of here since 1932, is so much at home on a boat that he hasn't lived ashore in the last eight years. He sleeps and cooks his own meals aboard the Wego, a 90-foot shore boat he operates for the owner. He has only one complaint—the dampness mildews his best suit.

During the summer he fishes alone. Working close inshore, he has cleared as much as $37 in a day.

In the winter he takes on a partner and fishes farther at sea. They set their 30 miles of trawls anywhere up to nine miles off the coast, and average catch is a ton or haddock and cod. The fish is sold to a plant at Moose Harbor at the mouth of the Mersey River. Fred to Storans

Offshore fishing means lousy hours for the two men. They leave harbor at 1 a.m., spend the day on the grounds and are back in port at three in the afternoon to spend several hours preparing bait for the next day.

Howling north Atlantic gales are an occupational hazard which Himmelman takes in stride. Last winter the Wego was six miles offshore when a storm broke. A longliner offered to escort her to port. "We didn't stop as many seas as his boat did," Himmelman remembers proudly, and the old Wego made the trip easily, even if she is powered by a 20-year-old automobile engine.

Chest X-rays prove worth in TB survey

OTTAWA, Ont. (cp)—Three million Canadians had chest x-rays last year and Dr. George J. Wherrett, executive secretary of the Canadian Tuberculosis Association, says they are in no danger from the radiation involved.

"A persons gets more radiation from a luminous wrist watch than from a chest x-ray properly administered," says the man who has been fighting tuberculosis through the association for the last 24 years.

"There is no doubt that great benefits have been derived from mass surveys," he said in an interview. "In the 15 years since they began in Canada thousands of cases of TB have been discovered. Were it not for the surveys many of these people would now be dead."

Last year 505,243 persons were x-rayed for TB in clinics, 1,817,318 in mass surveys and 710,586 in hospitals—a total of 3,033,147.

There were 9131 persons admitted to hospital for treatment of tuberculosis for the first time in 1956. Many were discovered thru mass surveys.

The Canadian Tuberculosis Association places x-rays in the same category as thousands of drugs which in small amounts cure illness, relieve pain but which, if given in a dose a thousand times greater, would harm or even kill the patient.

"The fact that 100 grams of a substance would kill a patient," said Dr. Wherrett, "is not a reason for withholding the small fraction of a gram that would protect him from unbearable pain or keep his heart beating through a brief crisis."

"In the same way, the fact that large dosages of radiation can be disastrous is not a reason for withholding the harmless amount which would detect tuberculosis at the point when the disease could most effectively be treated."

Scientists believe that a person can have a certain amount of radiation without harm. For every-day reckoning a safe limit has been set at 10 roentgens—units of radiation—in a lifetime.

This is the figure advised for the population as a whole. Persons working with radioactive materials are allowed 50 roentgens without any apparent ill effects.

"It would take 200 chest x-rays as taken in mass surveys to get to the 10 roentgens," said Dr. Wherrett, "and nobody is so enthusiastic that they go to mass surveys 200 times."

"In Canada most places have discontinued sending children under 15 to mass surveys. There is so much less TB among children than in the general population that it is much more efficient to use tuberculin tests in schools and follow up with x-ray of only children who show signs of having the disease in the tests.

"The average community has a survey every three to five years. If the mass surveys are more frequent in any community it is because the area has a higher-than-average incidence of TB."

"Tide Rips"

(By Jim Ibrahim)

The much worn saying "Crime does not pay" was much more than a saying to the sailors in the navy of King John of England.

His naval law was founded on the laws of Oleron. In fact, our present naval discipline Act can trace its ancestry back to these laws. The code adopted in Castile in the 13th century during the reign of Alfonso X, was brought back to England by Richard I on his return from a Crusade to the Holy Land.

The code of Oleron, although in our time must be considered extremely harsh and brutal, was written to combat the lawlessness of that day and age.

"Whoever shall commit murder aboard ship shall be tied to the corpse and thrown into the sea."

"If a murder be committed on land, the murderer shall be tied to the corpse and buried alive."

"If any man be convicted of drawing a knife for the purpose of stabbing another, or shall have stabbed another so that blood shall flow shall lose a hand."

"If a man strike another with his hand he shall be ducked three times in the sea."

Plenty of Gas For Export

Natural gas reserves of Western Canada are "unlimited". Frank M. McMahon, president of Westcoast Transmission Co., Ltd., told the company's annual meeting in Calgary this week.

"The discovery rate in Alberta and British Columbia has been so great in recent years that gas reserves have long passed the point when 'Canada will be able to use them,' he said.

Growth of the reserves was stimulated by the original decision of the Alberta government to allow export from the province," he said. "When Westcoast and TransCanada Pipe Lines were permitted to export gas, oil companies throughout the west stepped up the search for gas. The result has been the discovery of very large reserves, which now allow continuation of development drilling."

"The only way, however, to ensure development drilling is to provide markets for the gas and this means export," he said.

"Export in turn will stimulate new discoveries, provide for new industries, and distribute important economic benefits to all of Canada. The expansion of industry, and the growth of population and trade in the Peace River area following the construction of the Westcoast pipeline are only small examples of the results which will flow from an aggressive marketing of the natural gas that is so abundant in Western Canada."

Westcoast Transmission founded by Mr. McMahon, is Canada's first major natural gas pipeline. It was completed in October 1957. The $195 million system consists of gathering lines in B.C. and Alberta and 650 miles of 30-inch diameter main line from the Peace River fields of Alberta and British Columbia to Vancouver and the international border, as well as compressor stations and a gas scrubbing plant at Taylor, B.C.

All directors were re-elected; they are: Frank M. McMahon, Calgary; George L. McMahon, Calgary; D. P. McDonald, Q.C., Calgary; James Muir, Montreal; Hon. Frank M. Ross, K. St. J. C.M.G. M.C., L.L.D. Vancouver; Col. Victor Spencer, Vancouver; Norman H. Whitnall, Vancouver; Lloyd S. Gilmore, New York, and C. C. Whitteley, New York.

Question re U. Insurance Or Employment

Q—I would like to know whether a farmer can receive unemployment insurance benefits and under what conditions.

A—Usually a claimant who is employed on his own account in the operation of a farm is not unemployed, and therefore cannot be paid unemployment insurance benefit. However, he may be able to qualify for benefit during the farming off-season (October to March inclusive) if he proves (a) that he has at least 30 contribution weeks in the two complete off-seasons (October to March inclusive) preceding his claim, and (b) that his farm work during the off-season is so limited that he could accept full-time work.

Q—My salary has just been raised to $5,000 a year. I have been paying unemployment insurance since it started and I would like to continue and have protection. Can I do this?

A—You can continue making contributions by completing the necessary form indicating that you wish to do this. However, your employer in that case can require you to pay both your own and the employer's share. Consult the nearest National Employment office to obtain the form.

Q—My wife lost her job some weeks ago and is now drawing $19 a week unemployment insurance benefits. I am now out of work but I am told I can only draw $23 per week. Last year I drew $30 a week. What is the reason for the difference?

A—Your wife is not considered a dependent while she is drawing unemployment insurance in excess of $14 a week and, therefore, you are now drawing the single rate, which is $23.

Q—I have always worked full time but now I am ill. My doctor says I can only work a few hours each day. I don't feel equal to working more than that and the employment office says they haven't any part-time work that I could do. Can I draw benefits until I find something suitable?

A—If you left your last employment because of illness, you cannot draw benefit until you are again capable of and available for work. Whether or not you can draw benefit until some job within your capacity becomes available depends to a great extent on your physical condition and on official conditions. You should file a claim with your local National Employment office and give full particulars so that a proper decision can be given.

Sherry, Whiskey Before Dinner Good For High Blood Press.

Most people with high blood pressure will live to the age of 65 and over, is the current belief of the experts, says Mr. Galton in the January issue of Canadian Home Journal.

In fact, one-third of hypertensives die of something quite different. They generally live 20 to 30 years after the condition has appeared.

High blood pressure is just like any other handicap, and like any other handicap, takes a little adjusting to. When a panel of experts recently reported their findings to the British Medical Association, they recommended more sleep, more week-ends and a glass of sherry or whiskey and soda before dinner and on retiring.

St. Alban's Church Holds Annual Meeting

The congregation of St. Alban's Anglican Church, met in the Parish Hall on the evening of January 19th for their annual meeting. Rev. F. A. Dykes presided and heard very favorable reports from the People's Warden, Treasurer, Envelope Secretary, Women's Auxiliary, Junior Auxiliary, Sunday School and Choir.

The treasurer reported receipts up nearly 25 per cent over the preceding year. Regular subscribers to the support of the Parish have tripled in the past two years. Severe hail damage to the roofs of Church and Rectory provided a set back in 1957. The continued gratifying support of the members promises to make 1958 a year of marked advance.

Officers for 1958 are as follows: Rector's Warden, H. Turner. People's Warden, C. Clarke. Vestrymen, H. Turner, C. Clarke, F. Graham, J. Park, A. Graham, R. Pattinson, secretary; E. Howard, treasurer.

Tuberculosis "runs in families" for the same reason that measles, whooping cough, chicken pox, and mumps, and numerous other diseases do, because like them it is caused by germs which can travel from person to person. The closer the contact the greater the danger of infection.
